EDMONTON MARKETS.
Butter—The condition of the butter market remains practically unchanged. Number one butter brings twenty cents a pound. There is a fair amount being marketed, the demand being fairly well supplied.

Eggs—Eggs continue to be very scarce. Twenty-five cents a dozen and higher is offered.

Potatoes—A large amount of first-class potatoes is being delivered, the price being about twenty-five cents a bushel.

Poultry—Chickens are coming in freely, but the supply does not equal the demand. They bring eight cents a pound, live weight.

Beef—Two and a half to three cents a pound, live weight, is paid for cattle.

Hogs—The demand for hogs remains strong at from six to six and a quarter cents a pound. Even higher has been paid for choice hogs, but six and a quarter cents a pound is the average price paid. This high price will not likely continue very long.

Hay—The hay market is kept well supplied. Hay brings from ten to sixteen dollars a ton, according to quality. The large amount of hay sold at about fourteen dollars a ton, Green feed sells at from six to ten dollars a ton.

Wheat—Only a few loads of wheat have been brought in. A couple of loads were of excellent sample, but as yet no definite price has been set.

ALASKA COMMISSION.
Free Press.

London Oct. 20.—Hon. Mr. Sifton, when asked by the Canada Associated Press to express his views respecting the award just made, said: "The award is substantially in favor of the United States all along the line. We, it is true, have succeeded in establishing two of our main contentions: first, the Portline claim; second, the existence of the mountain boundary line; but while the finding is in favor of our contentions upon these phases of the case the tribunal has worked out a line in such a way as to deprive us of a practical benefit. While we get Wales and Pearse islands, of which the Americans have been in possession for some years, they are deprived of value to Canada by the fact that the two islands, which lie immediately outside, do not command the entrance to Observatory Inlet and Fort Simpson, are given to the United States. I do not profess to understand the principle upon which these islands are given away. The mountain boundary line, while adopted as contended for by Canada, is drawn so far back that the United States gets off that she has seriously contended for. As for our position on the subjects of heads of mists, it has apparently not received any consideration from the majority of the tribunal."

FORT SASKATCHEWAN

(Bulletin Special Dispatch.)

The sale of high grade cattle which has been carried on at E. Simmons' barn by G. A. Goun for the last two days, has been poorly attended, and cattle went cheap. Owing to the fine weather the farmers are all busy with the grain.

The main leaves here every morning except Sunday at 8:30, and arrives at 12:30. This gives business men all afternoon to answer their correspondence.

Shera and Company have decided to build their new butcher shop two stories high in place of one, as was first intended. It will be a fine shop when finished.

Mr. Neville White has moved into town from his farm in the Beaver Hills.

The weather for the past week has been all that could have been desired.

A RACE FOR CONGRESS.
The Clara Mathes company scored another success in the presentation of A Race For Congress, at the Opera House last night. Every reserved seat was taken and the large hall was packed to the doors. The play was highly different from that of the preceding evening, it being of a lighter character, but it was perhaps all the better enjoyed by following the heavier play. The first act was not an under to the play, each act being better than the preceding one, and during the entire last act the large audience listened with almost breathless attention, only interrupted by bursts of enthusiastic applause.

Miss Mathes as Nellie Glazebrook was very good. Daniel Glazebrook and Harry Neville were strong characters. Glazebrook brought down the house in Act three, the election. Capt. Westfield, the English Duke, and Dr. Chippendale were excellent, and furnished loads of amusement for the audience. Blinker and Beattie Simpson were very greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Le Mayne's beautiful and ladylike appearance on the stage was an added attraction to her skilful acting.

The specialties were, on the whole, exceedingly good. Oswald Robert's songs, English and German, were exceedingly well rendered. F. Sawyer's step dancing was greatly enjoyed, and was received with continued applause.

In a class by itself was the electric shirt dance of Miss Mathes. Different colored lights and views were thrown on Miss Mathes at points in the dance and the effect was one of the most striking beauty. This number alone was well worth the price of admission. This is the first time the dance has been given in Edmonton, and it is hoped that Miss Mathes will repeat it.

The company plays Tennessee's Partner tonight.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23RD, 1903.

FROM OTTAWA

Bulletin Correspondence.

In introducing the supplementary estimates for his department yesterday, Sir William Mulock, postmaster general, made his annual statement. The operations of the department show a net surplus of revenue over expenditure of $292,702. This includes the Yukon service operated at a loss of $102,614. Exclusive of the Yukon the operations of the department show a surplus of $395,316. The object of a calculation exclusive of the Yukon service is to make a comparison on equal terms with the operations of the department now and before the present postmaster general took charge; up to which time there was no Yukon service. The development of that country has since required a very large expenditure in mail service, which is necessarily beyond any possible revenue that could be derived. The postmaster general, therefore, very fairly claimed that comparisons between the post office operations under the present government and under their predecessors should exclude the Yukon. Last year the operations of the department outside of the Yukon showed a small net surplus, but including the Yukon there was a deficit of $5,109. The improvement from a net deficit of $5,109 in the year 1902, to a net surplus of $292,702 in the year 1903, is a most remarkable showing, especially when it is compared with the deficit of three-quarters of a million upon the operations of the department—which then did not include the Yukon—in the year 1896.

While giving to the postmaster general all credit for his economy in the management of his department, there has been a standing complaint—that the pay of country postmasters has not been at all in proportion to the services required of them. In view of the better showing made by the department in its operations of the past year, the postmaster general has decided to increase the minimum allowances to country postmasters to $25 per year as compared with a rate of from $10 to $15 existing previously. Accounting postmasters receive an increase of ten per cent on their present salaries and allowances. These increases will cost the department about $175,000 per year. The figures submitted by the postmaster general need no elaboration, they speak for themselves. It may be added, however, that the difference between deficit and surplus is only one feature of the change brought about by the administration of the present postmaster general. With this there has been a decrease in postage rates from three to two cents on Canadian and United States letters, and from five to two cents on letters addressed to any part of the Empire outside of Canada. There has been introduced the convenience of postal notes, the money order system has been simplified, and in every way the effort has been to secure the greatest public convenience.

While everyone applauds the reduction in postage and the replacing of a deficit by a surplus, there is not by any means the like unanimity in applauding the economy. But that is an essential feature of the program, and it is only by the exercise of rigid economy that the other two universally desired objects could, or can possibly, be achieved. No one likes to have his duties increased without a corresponding increase of his pay, much less likes to have his pay decreased without a corresponding decrease in his duties. But the postmaster general cannot make something out of nothing. The adjustment between convenience, efficiency and economy. That he should do this to the satisfaction of everyone cannot be expected; especially those who are pinched by the economy; but the fact that he has done it to the general satisfaction has done it to its vast of the country at large and to its benefit is not a matter for dispute.

Further supplementary estimates for the year ending June 30th, 1904, were brought down. The principal item is half a million dollars to provide for the surveys and other expenses of the transcontinental railway. The amount of intercolonial figures to the amount of $25,000, and the Trans Canada for $31,000. The Victoria Memorial Museum and other government buildings in Ottawa receive $180,000. These amounts are charged to capital account.

A feature of the supplementary estimates which is to notice the extraordinary length of the present session, is a vote of $7,591, to meet the extra expenses of the long session. This vote includes the balance of the late Mr. Cargill's indemnity, it being the custom to pay to the family of a deceased member the balance of indemnity for the session not already drawn. The total of these supplementary estimates is $771,365, of which $660,167 is chargeable to capital and $111,198 to revenue.

The transcontinental railway has been under discussion in the Senate for some days. So far there does not appear to be any likelihood of a combination against the bill. The Senators have taken sides according to party leanings, and it is expected that a vote will be reached on Friday or Saturday. The House has adjourned over Thanksgiving Day, but sits on Saturday. There are hopes of the session closing next week.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S OPINION

One of the British editors who recently toured Canada, in a letter to his paper, the Sheffield Daily Independent, says:

"I feel that the kind of inaptitude which cries out because it didn't know distances were so great, and because the cheapest railway carriages are not upholstered, and because food does not come to the mouth of the man who has no money—facts which one would think nobody could miss—is characteristic of numbers of English emigrants. For example, men will go out to Winnipeg, and expect to pick up casual labor, and say they are deceived because they find it precarious and not paid for as well as they expected. But fancy going to Winnipeg! The mere gateway of the West! The distributing centre for three-fourths of the emigrants! A place into which come a thousand men in a day on their way to work. It is the main thoroughfare of Canadian labor, and the last place in the Dominion where a casual worker should fix himself. What can you do with people who will not realize the most elementary facts about Canadian geography and life? I have no hesitation in saying that nine out of ten of the people who pretend that Canada is not what it is painted, either never ought to have thought of going out there, inasmuch as they were wholly unprepared for an open air life in a farming country, or else they never sought for work where ordinary intelligence and a little elementary knowledge of the country should have led them to seek for it.

"Then, again, there are the associations of people who take emigrants out on blue, for reasons roughly, or fanciful, or stupid—as, for example, the Barr colony fiasco. Utterly impractical people, who are Canadians in every farming Canadian, and know to all sound advice, persuade ignorant men to join in a sort of economic crusade. Of course failure follows, and an altogether undeserved discredit is attached to the country. The curses of Canada are, first, the number of rogues whose business it is to enslave the money out of the pockets of newly arrived ignoramuses, and secondly, the profound ignorance and gullibility and obstinacy of the immigrants, who will not take a plain, straight course in accordance with sound official advice, and give the country a chance to make them successful in a natural way.

"Is it worth while to emigrate? If so, who ought to go? And where should they go? I come back to these my questions, and I answer them thus: The natural wealth of Canada is her soil. Farming carries the whole community. Manufacturing is but an incident. If you can take to farming, understand it, and have only a little capital, or even no capital, it is worth while to emigrate. Were I a young son of an English farmer, with no hope of stocking a farm at home, or were I an English farm laborer and fond of my work, I should certainly save up from £30 to £50, not more—and go out to the Northwest, fully expecting in twelve to fifteen years to be very well off with a good farm of my own. It is worth a man's while to go out in this spirit with these tastes, but, unless he aims at actually taking up land and working it for himself, the change from the old country is a dubious thing. The man who goes out, as I have said, should expect to spend, say, £30 in crossing the ocean, crossing the eastern part of the Dominion, and getting himself fixed as an ordinary farm worker on a farm in an improving locality where he can learn the whole routine of farm life according to Canadian methods. After a year of this experience he ought to be able to select a good farm of his own land for himself and homestead on it. If he has no money, £100 is plenty for him to begin with. On that he should succeed. If he has no money the £100 is plenty for him to lose. But he will not lose it if he has chosen his farm with discretion. On the contrary, the farm will buy itself and stock itself and make him an independent man in a modest, honorable, enjoyable country way. For a man who can carry out this plan, Canada is a far more promising land than England. Before I have finished these articles I will give full details of how settlement on the land is effected, how the land is broken up and cultivated, and how estate value grows. Today it has been my aim to protest against the misrepresentations of a country like Canada by people who, knowing nothing of the country beforehand, drift into it casually, never realize the true and come away and grumble. Their grumbling should be at themselves."

WHY WE DIDN'T GET OUR MAIL

One day last week the entire mail for the town of St. Boniface disappeared, and there was no one who had any idea where it had gone to. The mail carrier for that town called at the Winnipeg post office for the bag of mail in due course, but instead of the mail for the town, he was handed a bag labeled St. Boniface, which contained the mail for Edmonton.

He complained to one of the clerks that he had not been given the right mail.

"Well, I guess we have mixed the labels on the bags, that is all," said the clerical clerk.

to the C. P. R. you will find a bag bearing the inscription Edmonton and St. Boniface. The carrier went to the station, but found that the train had left, so the St. Boniface people had to go without their mail until yesterday, when the bag came back from Edmonton, accompanied by some unkind words from the postmaster of that town.

FOSTER'S WEATHER FORECAST

Washington, Oct. 15.—My last bulletin gave forecasts of a disturbance to cross the continent 18th to 22nd, warm wave 17th to 21st, and cool wave 23th to 26th. The next disturbance will reach the Pacific coast about the 22nd and cross west of the Rockies by the close of the 23rd, the great central valleys 24th to 26th, the eastern states 27th. A warm wave will cross west of the Rockies about the 22nd, the great central valleys 24th, the eastern states, 26th. A cool wave will cross west of the Rockies about the 25th, the great central valleys, the 27th, and the eastern states the 29th.

This disturbance will belong to a period of high temperatures and will be followed by a cold wave. On the Pacific coast it will be followed by a fierce storm, and its fierceness will continue till it reaches the Mississippi river, after which its force will decline. The cold wave will bring frosts in the great central valleys about the 28th, but not far enough south to do much damage to cotton.

The last disturbances of October will reach the Pacific coast about the 27th cross west of the Rockies about the 28th, great central valleys the 29th, eastern states the 31st. The cool wave will cross the west of the Rockies about the 30th, great central valleys November 2nd, eastern states about the 3rd.

This disturbance will belong to a period of low temperature, and its cold wave will be its most interesting feature. Not far from November 1st, a cold wave will carry frosts far into the cotton belt, seriously damaging the top growth in most of the northern parts of the cotton country.

This cold wave will leave an impression that we are to have an early and hard winter, but November will dispel that idea.

FUTURE OF THE NORTHWEST

The Indiana Farmer, a leading agricultural paper in the United States, has the following article on Western Canada in a late issue:

"In the three Territories there are one hundred and ninety-three million acres of land, one hundred million of which are arable, and a little more than one million under cultivation. By means of irrigation much land in the 'dry belt' will be brought under profitable cultivation.

"It must not be assumed that the 'dry lands' are wholly without rainfall. On the contrary, they produce a luxuriant growth of native grasses, which cure upon the ground during the sunny fall season and furnish nutritious pasture the whole year.

It is evident, even to the most casual observer, that the Canadians themselves have no adequate idea of the productive possibilities of their lands. Where wheat has proved profitable, everybody raises wheat. So with oats. There is a general indisposition to experiment with anything other than what is considered the main cash crop, and but for the experiment stations and the occasional believer in mixed farming, generally an American, the visitor would frequently imagine himself in a one-crop district. It is not unusual to run across a farmer in Assiniboia or Saskatchewan so engrossed with his plowing, planting and harvesting of wheat, that he prefers to buy his dairy supplies rather than take the trouble to produce them. In fact one of the present needs of the Territories is diversity in farming, a spirit of experimentation that will uncover hidden possibilities, and the exercise of forethought to the end that the wonderful fertility of the soil may be maintained.

"Some 75,000,000 acres will most likely be devoted to stock raising for all time to come, because of insufficient rainfall for field crops, and the irrigation plans are so arranged as to lay the dry belt in all directions, so that mixed farming can be carried on side by side with stock raising. We saw this system in practical and successful operation in southern Alberta.

"The soils and subsoils of the Northwest Territories are remarkably uniform over wide areas. Almost everywhere the surface is a rich black loam. In some districts light and sandy, in others heavy and dense. It varies in depth from a few inches to several feet. In the grain farming districts the subsoil is clay; in the semi-arid districts, there is a considerable mixture of sand and gravel. The soil, if he is wise, see to it that he secures land with a strong clay subsoil. In the southern part there is little timber, except along water courses. The land is a broad, rolling prairie, ready for the plow. Away from the north timber is more plentiful, and the land is in many places partially covered with bush. On land partially covered with bush, on land from which this bush had been cleared we saw some of the finest fields of growing grain that eye ever rested on."

ALL ROADS LEAD TO EDMONTON

EDMONTON is the centre of attraction of the North-West Territories today. No place in the west occupies such an unique and enviable position. It being the centre of the largest and richest agricultural and mixed farming district in Canada.

The future coal supply depot for the Territories, hence the future manufacturing metropolis of the country. The coming great railway centre of the west. The gateway to the great agricultural, fur and timber country to the north and the distributing port for an area exceeding 900,000 square miles. The extent and far reaching trade of Edmonton is a source of wonderment and surprise to visitors but is only an indication of what is going to become. Edmonton is to-day one of the greatest distributing points of the world, forwarding goods over an area six times the size of the British Isles.
